Major Alastair Stewart-Irvine Died, Edmonton

Major Stewart-Irvine went overseas in 1916 and was missing in 1918.

He is survived by his wife and two children, Ian and Shirley, both going to the University of Alberta at Edmonton, and his aged father, British consul and mother also survive.

Major Stewart-Irvine was born at Madagore, Morocco for 30 years, and died at Edmonton in 1935.

Sexsmith and G.P. Seniors Play To Tie In Opener

Promising baseball was put away to a promising start when Sexsmith and Grande Prairie met in an exhibition game on the sports park. Wednesday evening.

Seven innings were played, the game ending in a tie, 6-6.

The diamond was fast, being run in with a new shape with the government section and considering that the ball season has only started the class ball served up was quite exciting.

The large crowd present would indicate that interest in baseball is being rekindled and a successful season is promised.

The local team looked natty in their new uniforms which carry on the back of each sweater the name of some Grande Prairie business firm.

The pairbeamers were Sexsmith and G.P. Seniors, Armstrong and Barrie, from Grande Prairie.

The game was well played, the visitors using two sets of batteries, while the locals used one. Armstrong for Grande Prairie and Barrie for Sexsmith.

In the last of the sixth Cameron took the ball and scored two runs, but a new home had not been made.

In the building of houses material is gathered and put together and at last the edifice stands complete.

Mr. Fisher compared life to a building, a something which devotes and grows together gradually, something which is useful and something which can be seen.

Appealing to the experience of the congregation, he referred to the home, the strong place where new home but a new home had not been made.

In the building of houses material is gathered and put together and at last the edifice stands complete.

In concluding, Mr. Fisher observed: "You and I are building an eternal home, a home which should not be disappointed, joys and sorrows have contributed to the building of that home. Let us build well and kindly and cement it with brotherly love."

Bro. E. V. Berg of Clairmont presided.

A large number followed the remains to the Grande Prairie cemetery, where the impressive Masonic services were conducted.

The pairbeamers were Frank Crampton, D. W. Pratt, J. Pickard, of Grande Prairie, George Armstrong, H. G. Smith of Spirit River, and J. Smith of Lake Sackatoon.

The large attendance which filled the church hall, the funeral tributes told the high esteem in which Dr. Bruce was held throughout the Grande Prairie district.

Large floral tributes were noted: Spirit River Masonic Lodge, Sexsmith Masonic Lodge, Canadian Legion, Mr. and Mrs. A. Weicker of Grande Prairie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank and family, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Berg and Josie, Bert and the boys, the former graduate of Toronto University in dentistry and came west in 1903, practising in Macleod in 1911, he moved to Calgary and came to Grande Prairie in 1920.

When the Great War broke out Dr. Bruce entered the service with the 10th Battalion, Dental Corps.

In 1906 Dr. Bruce married Miss Ethel Crompton, Barrie, Ontario, who passed away in 1934.

The following table indicates the game:

SCENIC HEIGHTS

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE FOR HOLIDAY

SCENIC HEIGHTS. May 27.—Those who were looking forward to a grandiose holiday at the Beaver Lodge were disappointed when the rain continued throughout Thursday and Friday. The way in which the rain continued to fall on his blessings on these parts is uncertain. If prosperity can be measured by the rainfall, then it is out to a red ground. The word of the day is the setback to the farmers, as it is continually getting later for those who have not completed their work.

With favorable weather the most of the wheat will be seeded by the end of the week. Several are cutting down their wheat fields and are increasing the amount sown to oats on account of the lateness of the season.

FIRST SOFTBALL PRACTICE

The first softball practice at Scenic Heights was at the school grounds on Saturday evening, May 18. A fairly good turnout was present for the first practice. The field was in the diamond made a rather uncertain footing at times.

The new wire fencing erected makes an effective backstop. *

DANCE

Here's the latest dope on the dance which is to be held in the community hall on June 10. May 30. The Red Saskatoons, a semi-professional band, will supply the music and we have it from various reliable sources that they can draw a large crowd. The cost of dance tickets is to be 50 cents.

The Athletic Club is in need of some funds as the members have a tennis court, a basketball court, and young folks who have been clamoring for a dance will now have a chance to kick up their heels and work off the effects of the tennis fever.

A whole evening of dancing on a good specimen floor, with a good bunch there, is sure to be a success, especially for the sum of fifty cents. So, gentle, bring your lady friend along— it costs no more—and get your spots of fun.

A special dance of 25 cents is being charged boys who are still in attendance at school—the ladies are free. Don't fail to be present, it has been asked that we have the "honge" at home.

SPECIAL SERVICE AT LAKE SASKATOON

On Sunday, June 9, there will be no church service at Scenic Heights but a joint service will be held at Lake Saskatoon at 2 p.m. to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the inauguration of the new church at Scenic Heights. The farmers are held up again as it is raining and they guess it is another two days delay.

The school children had a small swim in the river on Saturday in the afternoon. It was the first time some of the kiddies saw the tides.

NO POOR OR UNEMPLOYED IN THIS TAILOR-MADE TOWN

There are no poor, no unemployed, and no relief problems in the "tailor-made" town of Boulder City, Nevada. Each home, building and street was constructed on a scientific pattern by government engineers who laid out the city four years ago to house the workmen employed on the Boulder Dam project. Barren mountains form a background for this desert city.

THINKS EVE'S APPLE
MAY HAVE BEEN PEACH

It now appears that Eve's "apple" which started the world's first family trouble, was a peach. Such was the theory advanced by Lloyd C. Stark, author of "The Garden of Mankind," and an authority on fruit origins.

"In ancient days," said the nurseryman, "the Chinese believed eating a certain kind of peach would bring immortality and preserve the body from corruption. The peach tree was known to grow in the Garden of Eden and it may have been that the apple eaten by Eve in the Garden of Eden, after all was the Persian apple, or, as it is known today, a peach."

BOOK TALK

The Island: by Claire Spencer

The Island is a small one off the coast of Scotland, quiet and untouched by the progress of the outside world. The inhabitants make their living from fishing and farming. Suddenly the peace of this tiny island is shattered by the arrival of a pleasure steamer with a load of trippers. This will be the beginning of a series of such stories, and the islanders will find themselves being invaded regularly by hordes of tourists. But they find also, that there is a certain fascination in taking the boat to the mainland where one can see things and people that have never come to their way before.

Throughout the story of the break-up of the old way of life and the adoption of the new there runs the intense and powerful story of two of the last remaining families: a household of sea and storm, gloom and the changing seasons, the family of Muie and Morrisey, fight, courage, and effort; and the family of the Morriseys, the most prosperous farmers on the island, ruled by the mother—a hard, greedy, violent woman.

The first half of the story occurs through the love of the twin brothers, Gavan and Duncan Muie. Lucy Muie, the mother, took the Morriseys' most prosperous farmers on the island, ruled by the mother—a hard, greedy, violent woman.

The second half of the story occurs through the love of the twin brothers, Gavan and Duncan Muie. Lucy Muie, the mother, took the Morriseys' most prosperous farmers on the island, ruled by the mother—a hard, greedy, violent woman.

Throughout the book are touches of true Celtic foreboding. Claire Spencer has produced a beautifully written book, but one that will not leave the reader in a cheerful frame of mind.

FIRST AID FOR LIGHT CLOTHES

Small grease marks should be covered with a little French chalk and washed off with a soft cloth.

Brush off and leave a further application of chalk on overnight or longer. It will not disappear.

Treat ordinary greasiness marks with ground rice, same method as French chalk.

Fruit stains on any washable material are easily removed with the aid of borax. Draw the stained part over a cup of warm water, dip it and repeat the process. Rub gently in a circular movement, then wash in the ordinary way. Old stains may need a second application.

To remove perspiration stains, draw the marked part over a cup of warm water, rinsing the lemon away as the acid is apt to impoverish any delicate material.

"Waiter," Waiter, what is the meaning of this? There are two flies swimming about in my soup!" "Nonsense, sir. Why, they're both dead!"

"How did Brown manage to win the cross-country race?" "He was dead beat and sat down for a rest."

"How did that help him?" "He sat on a wasp's nest."

"I've changed my mind."

"Good! Does it work any better?"

What One Girl Wore:

By Betty Brownies

The reddingote, as a costume for late spring, has achieved a popularity this year which it has not had for some time past. It is a very becoming color, and the accompanying dress usually a print, this type of ensemble is certainly ideal for general all-day wear.

Because the reddingote tends to slenderize the silhouette, it is suitable for most types and adds from the neck to the waistline. In this figure, there is a practical point of view from which the reddingote must be considered, for one can usually be well dressed with a harmonious print, thus elaborating the wardrobe and affording frequent changes of costume.

Navy is a popular color for the coats of these ensembles because it combines with so many types of prints, but this season beige and beige, which is a charming color, blend of grey and beige, run close second.

This week we illustrate a reddingote which is typical of the seasonal trend and which is the favorite costume of one of Mayfair's smartest women.

The coat is in the small necked style, and the coat is wide with a wide belt. The sleeves, which fit at the yoke, are shorter than those of the frock, permitting a view of the dress sleeve.

The frock is long, full sleeves and a wide, ruffled neckline which ends in a bow at the front. The skirt is slightly flared with an inverted pleat both front and back.

Another practical point to consider

"Tons of Money" Well Acted By Little Theatre

"Tons of Money" was the vehicle on which the Little Theatre Group rode to favor with a fair-sized audience on Monday evening at the Capitol Theatre under the able direction of Mrs. G. Falconer.

The play was not an easy one, and it took unusual ability to bring the offering in this case the rose admirably. The scenes and the audience was not slow to show its appreciation.

The story of the play runs as follows:

Aubrey Allington receives a life insurance in his dead brother's fortune of $47,000, but as he and his young wife, Louise, owe so much money, they decide that, in order to dodge their debts, Aubrey should leave the country and turn up as the next heir, his cousin, George Maitland, who "met with a sticky end in a whiskey saloon in Mexico."

Louise has an idea, and Aubrey, following an explosion in his workshop of the newest invention of a "blasted" powder, Louise is to blow down the sparkling tube in which she has given over a lighted candle, thus touching the other end of the tube, so setting fire to a train of gunpowder leading to the explosion.

Unfortunately for Aubrey, Giles, the taciturn gardener, has set the clock on ten minutes so Aubrey is exploded. While he is killed, Louise, who has killed her husband, he stumbles in dazed and broken and his life is saved.

These weeks later Aubrey turns up, wearing a beard and moustache, and a Mexican hat, and with an acquirement, introduces himself as George Maitland.

In the meantime, the butler, Sprules, has hatched a little plan on his own, and though not enough money to enable him to retire and marry the maid, Simpson, Sprules arranged that his bride, Mrs. Lucy, his daughter, with Derry Lane, should disguise himself as George Maitland and claim the money. By various means, Sprules and Simpson have to warn Henry when he is in danger of being discovered, but then mistakes Aubrey (the George) for the real George.

Miss Jean Everard, Louise's cousin, complicates matters still more by confessing to Louise that she is really a widow, and when Aubrey is disguised as George Maitland, Jean recognizes him but has supposedly dead husband, Aubrey, only to find the testimony of the sentimental Jean, draws down upon himself the wrath of his wife, who finally decides to die as an extra suit of Aubrey's in the boat house, to wear when he comes out of the water. Mrs. Mulhall, Aubrey's deaf aunt, unknown but helps out Louise's plan by finding in the arbor the suit Aubrey has taken off in the boat house, so Aubrey's next appearance is practically in the nude, wearing only a suit of his own, his suit, and was found in the boat house, and died on the roller-iron in which the room is still attached.

Aubrey next turns up as his idea of a clergyman, the Rev. Ebenezer Brown; to find George Maitland was not so easy, but when he appears on the scene Jean again is sure this is the real George Maitland, for she'd known her husband anywhere by his name. Mrs. Mulhall, Maitland's wife, is a suspicious old soul and not so gullible, and Louise exposes their plot to "Henry" and threaten to bring the former back to life and claim the money unless George promises to pay Aubrey's debts. The Rev. Brown poster then borrows $25 from Aubrey until old Chesterton (the lawyer) "brings up." Then the real George Maitland arrives, and he is as crazy for, they think, he and "Henry" were the same person, treat him as such, and when his mother (as Henry had warned them) might. But the mystery is cleared when he comes face to face with his dead husband, and scuffles, but Henry makes his escape.

Jean is recognizing her real husband by hisักษ, when Aubrey, following the suggestion of Louise, has an idea, wanders into the room in a dazed condition with his clothing in rags. This is memory (which the explosion has rendered a blank) is restored, and he remembers the "feet of stone" of Louise, and when he sees them he says, "For tickets they sell for the Corps. Tickets cost: Adults, 50 cents; high school, 25 cents, and public school, 15 cents."
